Notes for SAMUEL FLEMING:

ID: I0919

Name: Samuel Fleming

Sex: M

Birth: ABT 1720 in County Antrim, Ulster Province, Ireland

Death: in Jefferson County, Georgia

Note:

Wife is unknown. Apparently she died in Ireland or on the ship enroute to Savannah Georgia in 1768. He arrived in Savannah, Georgia in December 1768 from County Antrim, Ireland. This family settled in Queensborough, Jefferson County, Georgia, 20 Feb 1769. Source: Bible and other records in possession of Mrs. Phillips Seebach, Louisville, Jefferson County, Georgia. Queensborough was probably changed to Louisville after the Revolutionary War in 1776.

It is believed that Samuel Fleming, Sr. came on the Ship "Prince George" from Belfast, Ireland to Savannah, Georgia which landed in December 1768, with five sons, James, Samuel, Jr, William, John, and Robert, and a sister. They are believed to have come from County Antrim, Province of Ulster, Northern Ireland being Scotch-Irish. Their ancestors were of the group of Scotts who migrated to the Ulster Province of Northern Ireland.

From "Ulster Emigration to Colonial America, 1718-1775", R. J. Dickson, 1966:

"The South Carolina bounty came to an end in December 1767 and, in 1768, Matthew Rea again drew public attention to his brother's settlement at Queensborough (Burke Co, GA). In conjunction with Beatty he advertised the advantages of settling in Georgia under John Rea or George Galphin on the same terms of tenure as in 1765. Not more than two hundred 'decent healthy people' were required and the passage money from Belfast to Savannah was to be only one guinea per person. Three months' notice of sailing was given but the advertisement was really a straw in the wind to see if the response would justify the chartering of a vessel. As the South Carolina bounty had now ceased, sailings to the southern colonies dwindled and Philadelphia again became the chief attraction for emigrants. Had a suitable vessel been sailing to Charleston the additional expense of conveying settlers to Savannah would not have been great, but diverting a ship from Philadelphia was a different matter. The response to the initial advertisement was so good that the "Prince George", already advertised to sail to Philadelphia, was chartered by Rea who made a short tour of central Down and north Armagh while William Beatty visited Ballymena to interview prospective settlers. The "Prince George" sailed to Savannah in October with 170 settlers for Queensborough on board."

From Rex Fleming:

"The Fleming's were granted land in Queensborough, St. George's Parish, Georgia in 1769. St. George Parish was later called Burke County, and the Queensborough area was still later cut off into Jefferson County. Queensborough consisted of 50,000 acres of land set aside for "Protestants from Northern Ireland", recruited by John Rae and George Galphin to help populate the frontier area. The town was near present day Louisville in Jefferson County, GA, but did not survive due to the Indian depredations and the American Revolution."

Notes for LAIRD BEATTY FLEMING:
[SamuelFleming.FTW]

The FLEMING family moved from Alabama to Santa Rosa County, Florida between 1839 and 1842. Laird Beatty held various public offices there. No record of his death has been found. He has often been confused with his cousin Laird Fleming (no middle initial B), son of Samuel the Immigrant and wife Mary Grier. Cousin Laird married Mary Hicks in 1844, moved to Panola County, Texas and raised his family there.

Notes for JEMIMA D. HODGES:

[SamuelFleming.FTW]

Her widow's pension for War of 1812 says that Laird died 1858 in Conecuh Co, AL
Letters written in 1839 , Laird spoke of debts so they might have been living with her relatives in 1858 when he died.

D. might stand for Dubois.

Letter found in effects of Jane Beatty Fleming Buchanan says that "Old missus Hodges" died 30 July 1835. Don't know if this is Jemima's mother or possibly a relation back in Georgia. Appears to be a relation to the Hodges in Washington Co, GA

Her birth year on tombstone says 1792 I think

A letter from Mary Ann Fleming Amos to Jane Beatty Fleming Buchanan says that Jemima died at the home of her son, Robert Pinkney Fleming.

Notes for ELIZABETH ELVIRA (ELVIRY) FLEMING:
 [SamuelFleming.FTW]

Elizabeth Roe joined brother Amos in the 1870's in Smith County, Texas. To locate Amos, she wrote to county land officials all over northeast Texas. A widow, she is reported to have hitched a team to her wagon and driven several head of cattle to Smith County, with a stash of gold buried in the flour barrel.

A tombstone with the name "Lizzie Roe" is found with those of Amos Milton Fleming, his wife Ahran Omanda, and daughter Ada Roberta in the Antioch Cemetery, Sand Flat Community, Smith Co, TX

Notes for JOSEPHINE (JO) T. FLEMING:
[SamuelFleming.FTW]

Hazel Long Liles and Irene Long Luster both told me on 24 July 1999 at the Long-Marshall reunion that Josephine Fleming was part Indian. They also said that she had a very bad temper. They remember once when she was mad at the dog because it was eating her eggs. She killed the dog with a hoe.

Her middle initial on the tombstone is T. But her marriage certificate says C.

A story told to me by Zane Marshall at Long-Marshall reunion, 22 July 2000:

There is a strip of land across from the old house that has not been sold like the other land was. The reason was that Josephine told them never to sell it because it was where she parked her buggy under the tree!! Apparently Josephine was a very strong-willed woman and what she said, you did.
